

Gift of Grace

Book 3, Tennessee Dreams

Sharlene MacLaren

It was a leap of faith for Grace Fontaine to bid farewell to her beloved fiancé, Jess Quinn, and send him on a four-month stint on the transatlantic luxury liner the Lone Star. When Grace learns that the ship was captured by pirates, her hope deflates—and it eviscerates entirely at the news that the pirate ship was destroyed, with no survivors reported.

Two years later, Grace receives word from a doctor in Paris, Tennessee, that her wealthy great-aunt is ailing and requires round-the-clock care. Grace volunteers, figuring there is nothing left for her in Boston. It isn't long after her arrival in Paris that she meets a charming lawyer named Conrad Hall, who wastes no time sweeping her off her feet and soon proposes marriage.

Weeks before the wedding, an unexpected guest shows up and threatens to throw a wrench in the plans. Will Grace go through with her marriage to Conrad? Or will an unforeseen turn of events change her mind?
